RESETTLEMENT
CONUNDRUM

It seems that as Hongkong's resettlement programme gathers momentum, in terms of units built, the waiting list in terms of un-housed squatters grows longer. But the conundrum has an explanation. Government's trouble may be that it is being too successful in rehousing the homeless, or too generous in fixing low rents, or not vigilant enough in determining who the squatters really are.

The Governor in his review of the year's events at last Wednesday's Budget meeting suggested that an official miscalculation had occurred: earlier it was believed that Government had reached the half-way mark with about 300,000 resettled and the same number awaiting accommodation. Now almost double this number, or nearly 600,000 people are found to be shanty dwellers. How could such a large discrepancy occur?

THERE may be a more convincing explanation of the big increase in the wide publicity that the resettlement scheme has received in recent months. One hundred blocks, a scheme unique in Asia, rock-bottom rentals: these are a few of the outstanding features of the programme which have made headlines in the local press. And many who were not squatters previously but lived abominably with their families in outrageously small bedspaces may have been lured to build huts in the hills in the hope that within a few years they would be resettled in the ubiquitous concrete H-blocks.

They may also have been encouraged to do so by the announcement that while Government plans to re-house slum dwellers at the rate of 20,000 a year, resettlement accommodation only slightly inferior and at lower rents, is to be built to house five times that number each year. We assume it is Government's firm intention to end the evil of these unhygienic, rickety, inflammable settlements as soon as possible and it might be wisest to employ the Census Bureau to make a survey of the squatter population, list the names of every individual squatter, "freeze" the waiting list, resettle them area by area, and finally announce that newcomers will be left on the hills.

THERE must be a limit to this type of accommodation and most will feel that after another 600,000 have been found places the limit will have been reached. For there will by that time be as many as 850 H-blocks in the Colony. There are still many on slightly higher income levels, waiting for rehousing in superior type buildings and the Colony would like to see greater progress made in demolition of the old wooden tenement dwellings which cover such a wide area of residential Hongkong. As it is the 600,000 squatters waiting for resettlement represent one-fifth of the Colony's entire population. They are increasing naturally at the rate of about 20,000 a year. Immigration from China is certain to add to the number. Unless the Colony proclaims a time limit for this scheme, it may be faced with a never-ending squatter problem.

Tenancy Tribunal agrees to Nathan Road skyscraper
BIG KOWLOON BUILDING SCHEME APPROVED

$1 million
to be paid

The Tenancy Tribunal has approved a giant 17-storey building scheme in Nathan Road, Kowloon and has awarded $1 million in compensation.

This morning the Tribunal announced its decision on the first phase of the $14 million project which aims to demolish the existing Wing Lok Building 35-39 Nathan Road, and replace it with 85 shops and 740 flats in a new building.

At the same time the President of the Tribunal, Mr. J. E. Dargan said the Tribunal could not assume the duties of a Town Planning Board and "it will probably come as a surprise to members of the public to hear that such an important scheme has not been before a Town Planning Board. The plans have merely been approved by the Building Authority," said Mr. Dargan.

He said that the Tribunal comprised a Magistrate and two lay members, (Mr. Au-yeung Yick Fung, and Major A. N. Breudo) drawn from the business community, with no specialised town-planning qualifications whatever.

They had to be satisfied that the project was in the public interest. Mr. Dargan spoke of the strenuous opposition raised against the scheme proposed by the Ming Man Land Investment Co., represented by Mr. Leo d'Almada QC and Mr. D. A. L. Wright, instructed by Mr. Y. H. Chan of Lau, Chan and Ko.

Not surprising

"That the tenants should be loud in opposition is not surprising. They enjoy very valuable property at very low rents. The premises are centrally situated in the busiest part of Kowloon and are in good structural condition."

"An application to knock down such buildings clearly places a strong onus on the shoulders of the applicant company. They have to satisfy the Tribunal that the scheme is in the public interest, and we must look on the scheme as a whole."

"We are told that there will be 85 new shops and 740 flats, the latter designed to suit the white-collar population of the $500-$700 income group. There is a demand for accommodation of the type proposed."

"The hardships to tenants to be dispossessed can be partly alleviated by payment of compensation."

"While we should have preferred a more dignified building, providing more spacious accommodation and more suited to Tsimshatsui, nevertheless we do not propose to refuse exemption."

Counsel appearing for opposing tenants had described the flats as "concrete match-boxes" and said that the building would turn an important and attractive tourist centre into a slum.

M.K. Lam and Co. and d'Almada and Mason, Mr. Benjamin Liu, instructed by C. Y. Kwan and Co; Mr. Henry Hu, instructed by Stewart and Co; Mr. A. Zimmern instructed by Bratton and Co and Mr. W. H. Young.

DAYLIGHT
ROBBERY

By A China Mail Reporter

In a split second, a prospective customer-turned-into a snatcher and escaped with two expensive watches worth $1,210 in broad daylight in central district yesterday.

About 12.30 p.m., a debonair Chinese gentleman in a grey European-style suit walked into Broadway Watch Company at 172 Des Voeux Road Central.

"Would you mind showing me that $500 watch in the showcase?" he asked shopkeeper Tam.

Tam obliged, taking out the watch with the white dial surface. The customer scrutinised it for a while.

"How about the one with the black dial surface?" the man pointed at another inside the showcase.

Tam took it out. The prospective customer looked over his second watch carefully.

"Any discount? I'd like to buy one if the price is cheaper," he said.

Scarcely had Tam apologised and refused, than he saw his prospective client pocket the two watches and make for the door.

Tam raised the alarm. A chase began with Tam and another shop assistant pursuing the thief through crowded streets-out of Des Voeux Road Central into Wing Lok Street into Queen's Road Central where a detective joined the chase.

Co-existence in HK impresses TV director

By CHINA MAIL REPORTER

Co-existence in Hongkong was a model for the world, an Australian television director said today.

He is Mr. Gerald Lyons of the Australian Broadcasting Commission who has just completed directing a television documentary called "Hongkong Dateline 1980".

"This peaceful co-existence that I have noticed was my greatest impression of Hongkong," Mr. Lyons told the China Mail today.

"Naturally before I came here I heard all the usual history behind the refugee problem but I was amazed to see everything working out so well. "It's nothing new to say that the progress here in Hongkong is tremendous."

"But what many people don't realise is just how well the European and Chinese population live together."

WELL HANDLED
"My impression is that this trend is just creeping on the population without either side really noticing it," he added.

Mr. Lyons whose film deals mainly with the "true picture of the refugee problem in Hongkong" believes that the situation is being handled better than anywhere else in the world.

"The barbed wire has been removed. This is something that most people even in Hongkong don't know."

"I know the Australian public will be surprised to see the separation merely a bridge with a wooden gate at the end," he added.

Mr. Lyons will leave with the rest of the television team for Australia tomorrow.

Case of the blushing burglar

New York, Mar. 1. Mrs. Margot Worlman, 41, had just time for a leisurely bath before her young daughters would return home from school for lunch.

She unlocked the door of her Manhattan apartment, on Monday so they could walk right in and then climbed into the warm bubble bath. A short time later she heard a shuffling noise in the foyer and opened the bathroom door to greet her children. But instead of her daughters the startled housewife was confronted by a handsome man in his 20's who blushed profusely at her rudely and shyly averted his glance.

"The quiet and you won't get hurt," he said in true underworld fashion and then the polite burglar timidly assisted

Mrs. Worlman into a housecoat. After she was clothed to his satisfaction he ordered her into a bedroom where he bound and gagged her.

Leaving her on the bed he ransacked the apartment and walked off with $300 in cash and $1,000 in jewellery. Mrs. Worlman freed herself and notified police. Despite her daughters' escape home—UPI.

Two big upsets highlight this morning's races

The second day of the Annual Race Meeting opened under ideal weather conditions at Happy Valley this morning.

The slight rainfall of yesterday merely laid the dust and the going was firm. Considering it was a mid-week event, the attendance was fairly large.

Backers got off to a fine start when K. Kwok scored a comfortable win on the favourite, Peculiarity, in the first race to pay $1 win dividend of $12.70.

The second race, however, provided a surprise when the two top favourites Nego Boy and Gigha could do no better than place third and fourth. Johnny Cruz brought Manx 3rd in with a strong late run in the last furlong to win easily by two lengths and pay the handsome dividend of $65.50.

The biggest upset of the morning came in the fourth race when Polaris came in first to pay a win dividend of $121.60.

Over 5,000
casualties
in quake

Rabat, Mar. 1. United States aircrews returning from the scene of the overnight earthquake which practically razed the Moroccan coastal town of Agadir reported tonight that total casualties in dead, injured and missing were now put at about 5,000.

Many victims were feared among the foreign tourists packing Agadir, in South Morocco, in search of sunshine.

The earthquake, which began shortly before midnight last night, was followed seconds later by a huge tidal wave which swept 300 yards into the low-lying town. It was the worst quake ever experienced in Morocco.

The aircrews, based at Nouasseur, near Casablanca, quoted Crown Prince Moulay Hassan of Morocco, who is directing rescue operations on the spot.

Tonight they started a round-the-clock mercy airlift with eight transport aircraft—Reuters.

Britons among survivors

London, Mar. 1. Viscount Robert Mowbray, nephew of author Somerset Maugham, was reported tonight to be in hospital in Casablanca following the Agadir earthquake.

The Foreign Office said the Ambassador's report listed five other British survivors, while tourist agencies said at least five other Britons were believed on holiday in Agadir—UPI and AP.

ATTEND BALLET ON THEIR FIRST PUBLIC 'DATE'

London, Mar. 1. London crowds went wild with delight tonight when Princess Margaret and her fiancé, Mr. Antony Armstrong-Jones, arrived at the Royal Opera House to see Dame Margot Fonteyn dance in a special ballet.

It was the couple's first public "date" since their surprise engagement announcement last Friday. The ballet was named "Princess Margaret Fantasy" and was composed three weeks before the engagement was known. A crowd of more than 2,000 greeted them.

Boycott of S. African goods starts

London, Mar. 1. Opponents of South Africa's racial segregation policies today launched a month long boycott of all South African consumer goods sold in Britain.

Housewives throughout the country were urged to avoid such shopping items as fresh fruit imported from South Africa and canned foods. The campaign is backed by the Labour Party as "a gesture of solidarity with those who are fighting against the evil policy of apartheid."

Though the boycott has been deprecated by the British Government, its organisers claim they have the support of many Conservatives and Liberal Party members.

The organisation of the campaign is based on 120 local volunteer committees throughout the country.

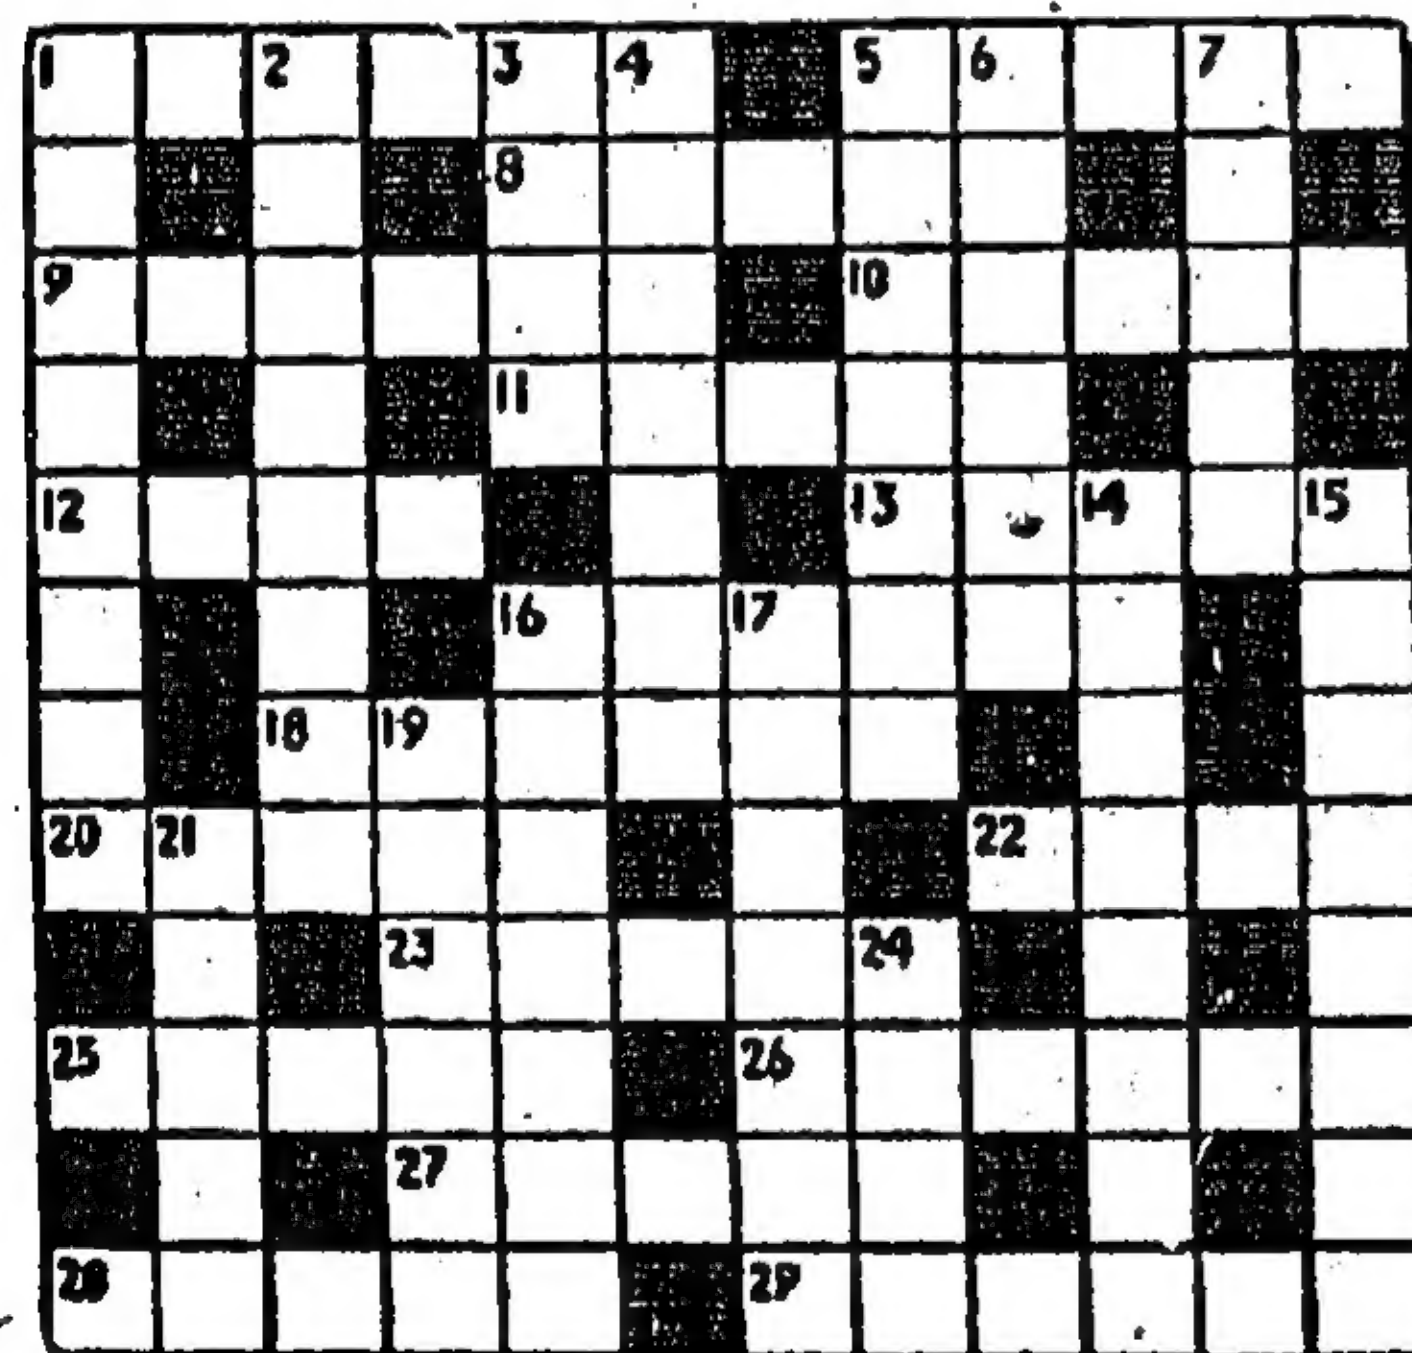

WENT SMOOTHLY

At the central headquarters in London today, the organising secretary, Mr. Martin Ennals, stated that country-wide plans went smoothly into operation this morning but it was too early to estimate the success of the boycott itself.

Mr. Ennals' headquarters, located in a vacant shop in the Fulham district of West London, were attacked late last night.

Its five plate-glass shop front windows were broken for the third time in five weeks. The offices were unoccupied at the time and the attackers escaped.—Reuters.

Agadir—'A horrible sight,' 'city of ruins and misery'

By Nadine Clouzel

Agadir, Mar. 1. Agadir today is a city of ruins and misery following the overnight earthquake which shattered most of this holiday and business centre on the sunny Atlantic coast of Morocco.

Ultra-modern hotels have been converted into piles of rubble. Huge rocks stand in the middle of torn-up roads.

Children are crying for their parents and tourists are looking with amazement on ruins of the hotels from which they were rescued.

I flew to Agadir early this morning with journalists accompanying King Mohammed of Morocco from Rabat.

I drove several times through the sun-bathed streets. The sight was horrible. There were ruins everywhere and stones strewn in the sun, blocked the streets.

Cars parked along the pavements were shattered and half-buried.

Beds, made up for the night, hung from fragments of walls. Several of them still sheltered bodies of people who had been crushed in their sleep.

A beautiful new 10-storey building was reduced into a mass of stones and steelwork in which I could see a child's cradle, a pram, an armchair and a rocking horse.

I watched sailors from the nearby naval air station pull a half-buried, semi-conscious tourist out of the ruins of this 40-room hotel, built only five years ago.

The cry of a child calling for its mother came from under the stone of the hotel. It was trapped, miraculously alive, under plaster beams, and rescue workers thought they would be able to save it.

It was understood that it was the child of a tourist family.

The Gauthier Hotel, whose rooms had offered a panoramic view of the whole bay, was also reduced to ruins.

Three people who stayed there have been reported safe. Of the rest of the residents of this 40-room hotel, crowded in this rush season like others here, there is as yet no news.

COLLAPSED
Almost all of the three companies of the Royal Moroccan Army stationed here are feared dead. The National Militia Headquarters has collapsed.

The Police Headquarters escaped with only minor damage but only a few constables were on duty during this night of Ramadan, the holy Moslem festival and fasting month.

Rescue workers had only picks and shovels to carry out their work. I watched men descend into deep holes in the rubble supported only by slender ropes, defying the chance that the walls would cave in on them.

One tough-looking public works department engineer burst into tears and brushed them aside as he continued removing bodies.

It is in the heavily-populated quarter of Talbourt that the damage was worst.

Only one road to this quarter is open, and it has big cracks in it. The others have been blocked by debris.

The people still live in fear. They are afraid that another shock will follow in the succession of the past few days.—Reuters.

Others were off duty and it is feared that many of them are missing.

The roof of the new central market, not yet opened, collapsed on its concrete pillars.

Other hotels and buildings, while still standing, are so badly damaged that they will have to be rebuilt.

Around the luxurious hotel, Mauritania, stunned tourists were standing in the streets, suitcases in their hands, hardly believing themselves alive. The interior of this hotel was ruined.

First reports said only about 20 of the 150 guests in the Saada Hotel had escaped death.

A nearby orphanage, which housed 100 children, was shattered and it is feared that only a few came out alive. A three-year-old girl was found alive—and crying for her breakfast—by rescue workers this morning at the Bellevista apartment building.

USIS stoned

Panama, Mar. 1. National Guard Headquarters said the offices of the U.S. Information Service in Panama city were stoned today and several windows broken.

Elsewhere in the City, Police arrested eight demonstrators who apparently intended to plant a large Panamanian flag on the canal zone boundary where demonstrators trying to do the same thing clashed with U.S. police and troops last November.

A spokesman said a report from a radio patrol car at the U.S. offices said the stones were thrown by a crowd of boys. No arrests were made there.—AP.

100,000 homeless in Mauritius

London, Mar. 1. The cyclone that swept across Mauritius last week-end killed 31 people, injured about 945 and destroyed more than 40,000 buildings, the Colonial Office reported tonight.

Something like 100,000 people are believed left homeless amid the chaos of disrupted water and electricity supplies. Doctors feared lack of water might bring serious health hazards.—AP.

Damages awarded to Polish general

London, Mar. 1. General Wladyslaw Anders, former Acting Commander-in-Chief of the Polish Army, was awarded £7,000 damages here yesterday in a high court libel action arising out of a letter in a Polish language newspaper printed in France.

He was also awarded two-thirds of the costs of the action which had lasted 15 days.

On the jury's findings, Mr Justice Ashworth entered judgment against the publisher, Mr Michael Krawkowski of Leszno (Poznań) France, and the contributor, Mr Adam Gas of Malda Vale, London.

The article, printed in Narodowice on January 28, 1959, alleged that during the first world war General Anders did not consider himself a Pole and that he refused to take part in a battle for the defence of Warsaw.

It also alleged that during the second world war he was "a Vro" (enemy or opponent) of General Sikorski's government and believed in Hitler's victory.—China Mail Special.

Intimidation of Africans

ALLEGATIONS BY MONCKTON COMMISSION

Lusaka, Mar. 1.

The Monckton Commission said here today that only a few witnesses had come forward in the Luapula Province to give evidence because of considerable "intimidation."

The Commission Press Officer said attempts had been made to prevent Africans attending an inter-racial party.

Today some members of the Commission which has split into two groups flew in two planes from Kasama in the northern province to Fort Roseberry, the administrative centre of the Luapula Province. Lord Monckton travelled with the party.

Placards were displayed at Fort Roseberry airport and along the route taken by the Commission, whose cars were stopped so that members could read the inscriptions on them. Some of the placards were held upside down.

There were sporadic demonstrations outside the provincial headquarters in Fort Roseberry but the crowd was orderly and the police did not intervene. At its first session this afternoon the Commission heard evidence from two African authorities and the headmaster of a school in the Lake Bangweulu area, and two memoranda were submitted.

Very pleased
Exhortations by the United National Independence Party, Northern Rhodesia's strongest African political organisation, have been largely disregarded in the Kawambwa area and considerably more evidence is expected to be put forward there later in the week. In Lusaka, Lord Crathorne, a member of the Commission, asked at an official tea given by an African chief whether he considered any of the evidence given to the Commission to be frivolous. "No, not at all," far from it—we are very pleased with the evidence and the amount given,"—Reuter.

Olivier returning to London stage

London, Mar. 1.
Sir Laurence Olivier, the actor and director, will return to the London stage in April in a farce, "Rhinoceros," to be directed by Orson Welles. Sir Laurence is expected to return soon to Britain from the United States where his production of Ben Hur's verse-play, "The Tumbler," ended after five performances. "Rhinoceros," written by the Rumanian-born surrealist, Mr. Eugene Ionesco, is having a successful run at present in Paris with Jean-Louis Barrault. The play is a satire on the Hitler regime, telling the story of a small village where the inhabitants turn one by one into Rhinos.—China Mail Special.

Two Adelaide lawyers who appeared for the defence at the murder trial of Rupert Max Stuart, an aborigine, were admitted to practise in Victoria by the state full Supreme Court today.

They are Mr James David O'Sullivan and Miss Helen Devaney.

They also acted for Stuart when a Royal Commission was appointed to inquire into the conviction and certain events leading up to it.

Both said later today they intended to practise in Victoria. Mr O'Sullivan is a barrister and Miss Devaney is a solicitor.

Mr John Clarke, QC, who appeared for Stuart at the Royal Commission, was one of their sponsors.

Since the Commission ended, Mr J. F. Brazel, QC, who assisted the Commission, and Mr R. Chamberlain, QC, who appeared for the Attorney-General, have been elevated to the South Australian Supreme Court bench.

The Commissioners were the Chief Justice of South Australia, Sir Morris Manion, who was chairman of the court which dismissed Stuart's appeal, Mr Justice Ross, and Mr Justice Reid, who was judge at Stuart's trial.—China Mail Special.

Pancake race title won by UK

Liberal, Kan., Mar. 1.
The girls in this Kansas city failed to measure up to the standards of Olney, England, today and lost the international pancake racing title.

The best American entrants in the annual Shrove Tuesday competition between Olney and Liberal was a time of one minute 15.5 seconds by a 24-year-old physical therapist, Ann Heuter.

That was 5.5 seconds slower than the stepping of Carole Vorley, 18-year-old English shop girl, who dashed to victory in the Olney leg of the race earlier in the day.—AP.

U.S. cotton men seek to check HK competition

Washington, Mar. 1.
American cotton goods manufacturers today presented to the Customs Tariff Commission of the United States their case for increased protection of the American cotton industry against the competition of new textile industries of the Far East.

K. Horne, an economist of the "National Cotton Council of America" in a long deposition backed with statistics, said that measures were needed to prevent American imports already large, from increasing in the future. The Tariff Commission this morning began a public inquiry on the Agriculture Department's suggestion that a compensatory tax of 8 cents per pound be imposed on the raw-cotton equivalent of cotton goods imported into the United States.

Horne said the danger to the American textile industry came equally from Japan, Hongkong, India, Pakistan, Formosa and Korea. American imports from those five countries, he said, which had been practically zero two years ago reached a total of 40 million yards in the last quarter of 1959.

Japan since 1937, has applied a voluntary export quota on its sales to the United States. But American imports from all the other countries rose from 40 million yards in 1958 to 147 million yards in 1959—a 280 per cent increase.

Horne stated that textile workers salaries in Hongkong averaged seven cents an hour while they stood at a dollar fifty cents in the United States. He predicted that after Hongkong and other countries would soon attain the economic development necessary to "threaten" the United States in this field, for example the Philippines, the Nansai and Napa Islands and Formosa.

RAW COTTON
He noted that Japan purchased from the United States from one quarter to half of the raw cotton it used but this was not the case with certain new exporting countries. India and Pakistan for example, are themselves large producers of raw cotton.

Speaking for the Japanese textile industry and the American importers of Japanese textiles, Mike M. Masoka expressed opposition to the proposed compensatory tax asked by the Agriculture Department. Masoka stressed that Japan was the United States' best customer for raw cotton. This year he said, Japan would purchase more than a million bales of raw cotton from the United States—almost one fifth of the United States total sale. Japan sends back to the United States the equivalent of only 130,000 bales—about a tenth of what it buys—in the form of textile products.

The Commission's hearings are to continue for several days.—AP.

BRITISH TV GOING RED

Leipzig, Mar. 1.
East Germany intends to set up a coloured television system and has placed orders with a British firm for equipment. Usually well-informed sources said here today that so far a colour camera and a pulse generator, and filming equipment worth about £20,000 had been ordered from Cintel London Ltd.

British companies are also competing for the plum of the order—the colour, transmitter, which might be worth up to £250,000, the sources said.—Reuter.

Warning to bachelors and spinsters

Verona, Mar. 1.
The leather-lunged match makers of Verona ushered in March as usual on Monday night by keeping half the city awake and blushing.

It's an ancient custom in this home town of Romeo and Juliet. Groups of youths, armed with wine funnels as megaphones, climbed to vantage points on Monte Baldo, overlooking the city, and started their night-long pranks of matrimony.

First they berated such eligible bachelors and old maids as have so far eluded wedlock.

INHERITANCES
Then they named off the city's young men and women, now coming of marriageable age, chanting their virtues and in some cases their reputed incomes or potential inheritances. Some of the groups of chanters even volunteered some suggestions as to who should marry whom, citing the advantages of the various matches they proposed.

It lasted until almost dawn. And if any of the match makers still have a voice left, they'll probably be back on Monte Baldo again tonight to continue the work of Cupid.—AP.

Soraya meets Orsini

St Anton, Mar. 1.
Ex-Queen Soraya of Iran and her old-time escort, handsome dark-haired Prince Raimondo Orsini of Italy, met here tonight for a candle light dinner amid new romance speculations.

Soraya arrived at this fashionable ski resort in the Austrian Tyrol today by train from Munich. Prince Orsini was staying for several weeks at the Post Hotel where also a two-room suite, the "Soraya suite," had been booked for a fortnight by the beautiful ex-queen.

When Soraya descended from her suite and entered the hotel lounge Prince Orsini jumped to his feet and hurried to kiss her hand. Soraya stood still and smiled a greeting.

Then both went into the dining room for dinner at a reserved table. They were joined for the candle-lit meal by Prince Orsini's secretary and friend, Pierre Lemans.—AP.

TIGER, TIGER BURNING BRIGHT

ALTHOUGH the year 1914 marked the end of the old world and the beginning of the new, this line of demarcation cast no apparent shadow in Hongkong. The gentlemen of Canton, to whom most of the criminal classes of Hongkong had some affinity, could not have cared less.

Neither were the Europeans much disturbed beyond the fact that the Germans and British businessmen now found themselves enemies.

Away, up in Peking there was a certain amount of apprehension later in the war when they found China had cast her vote for the Allies, and that the formidable Prussians, with memories of Count Waldersee, were once again the enemies of China.

But this was far from Hongkong, and the only immediate results were a rush of patriotism, a scanning of maps of the Western Front, and the departure of certain of the Police Force, along with other young Englishmen, who left the Colony to fight and die in far off fields.

Meanwhile, conditions in the neighbouring Province of Kwangtung were quieter, though the disbanded soldiers of the Chinese Revolution remained across the border on plundering expeditions, and plagues became more frequent.

These latter conditions prevailed more or less right up to the time of the Japanese occupation of Canton, so will not be mentioned here again, as their telling becomes monotonous.

The specials

However, war made certain demands upon the Colony which affected the Police, so on October 23, 1914, the Special Police Reserve Ordinance was passed.

The new Force was quickly recruited in February, 1915, and Mr F. C. Jenkin, Barrister-at-Law was appointed - the first Commandant with the rank of Assistant Superintendent of Police.

Two Indian Constables went to the aid of the European Policemen, and the tiger slunk back into the thicket.

Croucher was severely mauled and had a broken arm.

Assistant Superintendent Burlingham, accompanied by a number of Constables went after the injured beast. They surrounded the thicket, and fired into it. The beast, maddened with pain, sprang at them.

Indian Constable Rattan Singh was right in the way of the charge. The tiger lunged at him and bit right through his skull. The Constable closed in and killed the beast. Too late. Constable Singh was dead.

Meanwhile the injured Sergeant Croucher was rushed by special train to Kowloon, where he was treated at the Civil Hospital for his broken arm and multiple injuries.

At this time, 1915, Government at last turned its attention to quarters for the Police, so a block of three-storey buildings containing nine flats was erected in Causeway Road.

Also, in the same year, considerable building of Police Stations was commenced.

At the same moment the tiger decided to look for Sergeant Croucher, and as is inevitable, if you are taking on a tiger with your bare hands, you are stepping out of your class.

With a growl, the tiger jumped, the Chinese ran, and Sergeant Croucher hit the ground with the tiger on top of him.

Constable Holland, with great presence of mind and at much personal risk, ran up and emptied his revolver into the tiger.

A growl

The excited villagers pointed out a small thicket. Sergeant Croucher, fed up with this wild tiger chase, thought he would settle it one way or the other, so he went into the thicket to look for the tiger.

that the collapse of the archaic monarchies in Europe, together with the setting up of democratic governments, affected the whole world. But the greatest event of all was the downfall of the most tyrannical monarchy of old Russia, and the establishment of a form of Government founded upon the theory of Marx, and all that meant, ethically and economically.

The new Soviet Government, in the first wild rush of success, made a sweeping statement, not dissimilar to that made by the French Revolutionary Government a century and a half earlier, which in effect meant that all peoples who arose and overthrew their existing Governments could count upon the aid of the Soviet.

The strike

Just as a stone thrown into a pond sends out ever widening ripples, so after a time, do these uprisings and disturbances reach the far scattered parts of the earth. By that time, the first statements might be obsolete, but nevertheless, the original theories, distorted somewhat, filter through.

So it was that on January 13, 1922, the newly-formed

The HONGKONG POLICE

By JOHN LUFF

In 1917, it was found necessary to station Police at Castle Peak. A matched dormitory and mess were built, while a cell was constructed of brick.

The most unintelligent thing a person can do is to pontificate upon an event of forty years ago with a 1929 ethic. Judging now, the demands of the seamen seem pitifully modest. Judging then, with the Red-bogey much in evidence with the murder of the Russian Royal family new in memory, this seemed the thin edge of the wedge.

The strike dragged on because, as was usual by ancient customs, the leaders themselves were not evident, but kept sending go-betweens. It is very evident to the present writer that the real leaders were in Canton where they were instructed by Soviet observers who, on instructions from the Third International or Comintern, were instructing everywhere on the theory and practice of revolution and re-establishment.

The Hongkong Government declared the Union illegal in Hongkong. On February 1, 1922, the Hongkong Police interfered when violence and intimidation, in keeping with the new theories, were used to pull the stewards and coolies into the strike.

Various well-meaning, but totally ignorant public bodies tried to settle the trouble, but failed, because they were unaware of the new forces sweeping the ranks of the workers.

Then the Chinese made an appeal which never falls—and has succeeded right up to this moment. The appeal was above all theories, Marxist or otherwise. It was the Chinese appealing to the Chinese. That did it. Out on strike came the servants, the butchers, the bakers. This threatened to leave the Colony hungry.

The Governor-in-Council issued a Proclamation prohibiting the departure of any Chinese from the Colony without a permit.

This was about as effective as it is to deny them a permit. But it did prevent them leaving by the regular sea and rail services. So they walked out. They started out early on March 3, 1922, and met the Police somewhere about Kowloon Water Works.

The Police cried halt, and the Chinese, leading the march, cried back, but those at the back cried forward. So forward it was.

At the 5th mile stone, the Police were reinforced with the military.

The Police called upon the agitators to halt, but by this time, they were in a nasty mood. With a shower of stones and the seizing of anything to hand, they broke through the Police cordons. The troops fired, and five persons fell dead. The crowd dispersed and retreated to the barracks. At the judicial enquiry, the jury found a verdict of justifiable homicide.

The strike was settled on March 6, and the Seamen's Union was allowed to re-open.

In Hongkong, where agitation was directed from Canton, it took the local and traditional view. That the masses of China were being exploited by Imperialism to which was added the new term here—Capitalism.

One is forced to admit that the Third International contained the finest political scientists of the age. Students can discover that local agitation was adapted to the emotions and aspirations of the classes within the Colony.

For instance, the student class was fed upon such stuff which was well calculated to arouse its emotions. Yet even then, it was old, and not dissimilar from that which aroused China at the end of the nineteenth century. China's humiliation at the hands of the foreigners, almost word for word, the kind of stuff used today.

It succeeded, as did the more superstitious stuff given to the masses, together with the never failing "have and have-not" line. But all classes were united by one rallying cry, "O Chinese."

This, I say, was extremely clever, for every class responded to the call. But on the other hand, it proved both the power and the intelligence of the Third International who struck through the best organized and wildest Trade Unions. Locally they were the Hoi Yuen and the Association of Labour Unions. Although both of these Unions were composed of illiterate members for the most part, the political theory and action departments.

Rumours

In June, 1925, political agitators from Canton and Shanghai were in the Colony addressing meetings, but they were afraid to strike because they had no place to retreat to, should they lose the first round—for Canton was in the hands of the Yunnanese and Kwongsi Forces.

However, the Kuomintang Army advanced and occupied Canton. Then all was ready, and agents of the Third International moved into Canton. Liu Chung Hoi was the link between the Third International and the Chinese, and on June 15, 1925, he summoned ten Hongkong representatives to Canton, and gave certain orders.

Twenty-four hours later, wild rumours spread through Hongkong. Victoria would be burned to the ground, pitched battles would be fought, but all leaving the Colony would find food, shelter, and financial aid in Canton.

On June 19, 1925, the Hongkong and Macao Steamboat Company came out on strike, to be joined by workers of the Hongkong Tramways the next day.

On the night of June 20, violently worded placards of an anti-British nature were posted all over the City, calling out the Chinese to wipe out the British and the British running dogs.

Government offered substantial rewards for any information leading to the apprehension of any persons distributing these posters. As a result, this method of agitation soon died away. On the other hand, hundreds of letters were sent through the post threatening death to any who continued working.

A Secret Society calling itself the Labour Commission met at the Hoi Yuen and other seamen's boarding houses. This society was recognised by all who went on strike. One of its members was caught with twenty letters upon his person, all bearing the chep of the Labour Commission. Under the emergency powers in operation at the time, he received seven months' hard labour.

No doubt

By June 11, the strike was just about total, and people left the Colony in thousands. On the other hand, there was no difficulty in engaging labour. In order to give maximum protection to this movement, workmen were engaged through the Police Department.

There is no doubt whatever that the failure of the Third International to upset the Colony was due to the Chinese who had established themselves within the Colony.

In the first case, they knew the source of the agitation, and the Chinese intelligentsia would have none of it.

A Labour Protection Bureau devised by a Chinese Military Officer ensured that the Chinese remaining loyal to Hongkong were not intimidated.

The work done by the Chinese detectives in unmasking the thugs of the Comintern cannot be overestimated. As a whole, the Chinese members of the Hongkong Police Force stood firm and loyal, although in turn, were threatened with violence if they did not desert the Force.

With a such a solid front of Chinese opinion against this Comintern-inspired agitation, things rapidly began to improve.

The Tramway Company resumed running after a stoppage of only 24 days, and by the end of July, a new staff largely obtained through the Labour Protection Bureau, had the trams in full service.

During August, labour conditions continued to improve, and the Police Department ceased to handle the engagement of coolies, so the City Hall Labour Exchange closed down. The Hongkong Volunteers and Special Police were demobilised.

Stir up

By September, only the boycott of the Colony continued. This was a severe testing time for the Police, but of the 533 Cantonese Police, including detectives, only eight desertions due to the strike occurred. The Police were called upon to perform some tough duties which included raids against crowds of agitators reinforced by Comintern-trained mob rousers. The hands of the Police were strengthened during this period in that they would report any they caught who were in the Colony merely to stir up trouble.

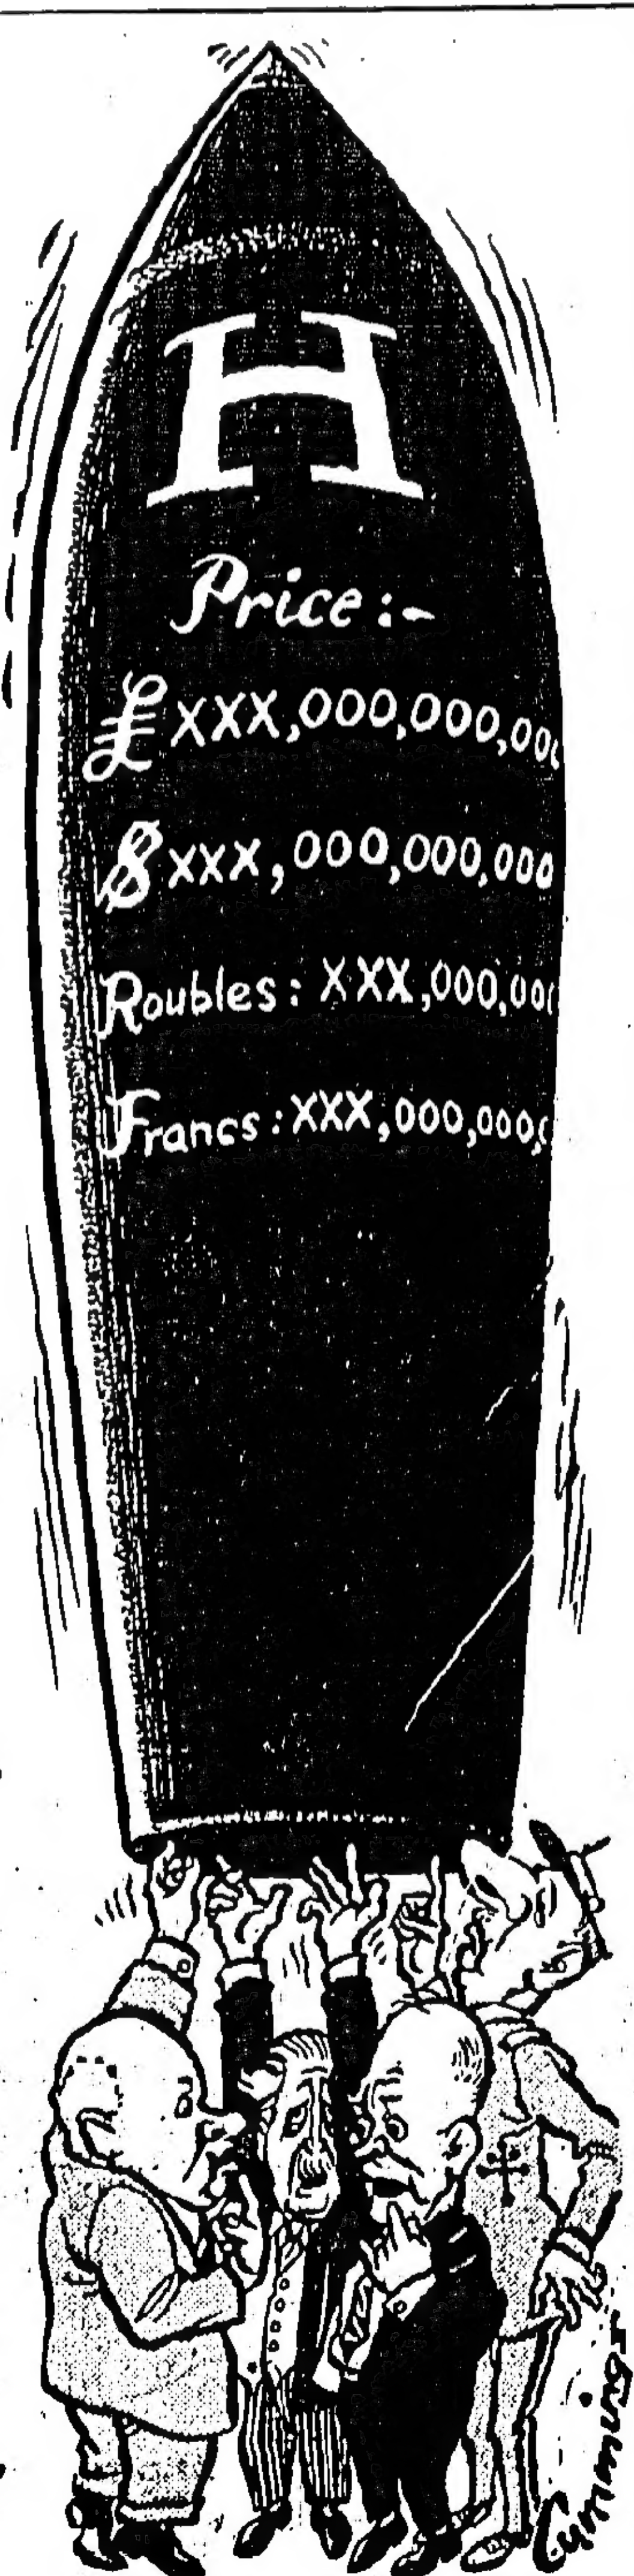

The Comintern-directed agitation aimed at the Colony failed because:

- The Chinese established in the Colony associated themselves with Hongkong and its welfare. Also the influence of the Chinese intelligentsia was upon the side of law and order, and opposed to anarchy.
- The Chinese Police, except for the very few exceptions, stood loyal to Hongkong.
- The Comintern thugs, sent from Canton to use violent methods and to cause the mobsters were in turn given a taste of their own medicine by the Chinese directed Labour Protection Bureau.

The Secretary of State for the Colonies sent this message to the Hongkong Police Force. Dated December 30, 1925, it reads: "I have to express my satisfaction at learning of the loyalty displayed by the Chinese members of the Force, and my appreciation of the work of the Police in this trying crisis."

HE IS A MAN WITH A MISSION — TO CONQUER THE OUTBACK

SOMEWHERE in the parched semi-desert of Australia's Northern Territory a man, his two sons and two daughters are trying to disprove a theory that the Outback can never be conquered. They have sold up to start a farm in the Central Mount Wedge area.

Gilbert Coppock, who for 29 years believed that the Outback could be tamed, has brought along 800 head of sheep and a few miles from his old farm further south.

In the Outback he will have to build his own home and plant many acres of lucerne (a plant cultivated for fodder) to feed his sheep. But before anything else, he will have to find water. The land the Coppocks have set out to conquer is virtually unexplored by white men. Surveys from the air have been made. Tribes of roaming aboriginal blacks pass through from time to time.

If Coppock succeeds, then other farmers will be tempted to leave the coastal belt, where grazing land is of a premium.

His nearest neighbour is 200 miles away over a roadless desert where cars cannot run.

On his way through Alice Springs, Coppock said:

Big defeat for S. Australia in Sheffield Shield

Perth, Mar. 1. Defiant batting by John Duckar (67) and Rex Sellers (60) failed to save South Australia from heavy defeat by Western Australia in their Sheffield Shield match here today.

Western Australia, who had forced their opponents to follow on 345 runs behind, won by ten wickets.

South Australia, shot out for 50 in their first innings, totalled 89 in their second knock-out, but this set Western Australia to get only 23 to win.

Western Australia's win gave them third place with 34 points in the Sheffield Shield's final table.

New South Wales has already clinched the title with 50 points, and Victoria was second with 48 points.

Made false statutory declaration

A 27-year-old woman, Chiu Fung-kam, of 199 Hoi Tan Street, second floor, was fined $50 by Mr Derek Cons at Central Magistracy this morning when she pleaded guilty to making a false statutory declaration.

Sub-Inspector J. Callace told the Court that on February 9, 1958, the defendant, in making a declaration at the Supreme Court for the purpose of going to Canada, stated that she had no children, living or dead.

Whoa she made another declaration for the same purpose at the Supreme Court on March 20, the same year, she stated that she had given birth to a girl in 1952.

Sub-Inspector Callace said when the defendant was interviewed by the Canadian Immigration Office yesterday she admitted the offence.

Dear Sir

N.T. reads it too!

Maybe the reason why Mr Patrick Knox continues to peruse your column, "At the Keyhole," is he feels the ladies and gentlemen who are the objects of your keyhole view are probably sharing his nausea, so his view is not merely venting private feelings and his perusal has an element of moral interest.

MEGAN PIPS RICKSHAW IN 30-YARD DASH

By A China Mail Reporter

EYES bulged and traffic stopped when East met West yesterday in a novel race down Nathan Rd.

The contestants? A beautiful Australian "pop" singer and a bewildered but amused rickshaw boy.

It all started at a cocktail party held in honour of Megan's arrival in Hongkong.

In a conversation with some reporters Megan revealed that she had missed her daily jog around the park at home.

"I used to run competitively in Australia but I always used to keep fit for singing, with plenty of exercise and running," she said.

It was at this point that entrepreneur Benny Tung made the fatal mistake of daring the young Australian.

"I bet you couldn't beat one of our rickshaw boys," Benny said playfully.

"Climbed," was the quick reply and before many seconds passed a deal was made to arrange a 30-yard race along Nathan Rd.

Boy sent to training centre

A 10-year-old youth was found guilty of having robbed a young student and was ordered to be sent to a training centre by Judge B. J. Jennings at the Victoria District Court this morning.

The youth, Yan Ying-kuen, of 420 Block "O", Shek Kip Mei Residential Estate, had a previous conviction for being a truant school member.

The prosecution's case was that on the evening of December 30, a 16-year-old student, Chan Kwok-jung, was playing basketball in a playground in Shek Kip Mei when he was set upon by four or five people, assaulted and robbed of his watch.

Another accused, a 15-year-old boy, was ordered to receive six strokes of the cane on January 21 when he pleaded guilty to the charge.

Chief Insp. T. W. Wheeler prosecuted.

The next day the rickshaw boy was found and he obliged (only after a crisp dollar was pressed into his hand) and the race was organised.

The distance was measured out and the two contestants, Megan dressed in pedal pushers and the rickshaw boy hunched by his vehicle, took the line.

Seconds later they were away and pedestrians goggled and cars screeched to a halt as the pair lumbered over the short distance.

The race although brief in distance was not without excitement.

Seconds after the race had started a curious taxi driver edged too close to the lumbering rickshaw boy and nearly ran him off the road.

Megan continued strongly over the miniature course and edged a four-foot victory.

"Wait till they hear about his back home," Megan gasped after the race.

"They won't believe it. It's the craziest thing I have ever done."

The rickshaw boy smiled and trotted back to his "beast" none the wiser but a dollar richer.

Stole letters in Kowloon

A 27-year-old unemployed man who pleaded guilty to eight charges of letter-stealing from various parts of Kowloon was remanded for three days by Mr I. M. S. Donnell at Kowloon court this morning.

Detective Sub-Inspector Chan Shek-kong said that Lam Wah-kwan of 214 Queen's Road East, ground floor, was found hoarding two letters on February 29 at No. 28 Hart Avenue.

Four more letters were found in Lam's pocket.

Defendant also admitted he broke open the letter boxes to steal the contents.

Man assaulted

A Chinese man was injured at 4 a.m. today when he was attacked in Yu Chau Street, Shamshui, by another man.

The injured person was admitted to Kowloon Hospital. Police are making enquiries.

Friend tells of boy with flick knife

"If you want to fight, come out!"

A 13-year-old boy, charged with the murder of another boy, Ng Siu-chung, on February 1 in Kowloon, is alleged to have said that when he challenged Ng with a flick knife.

At the committal proceedings in Central Court this morning, Mr T. L. Yang was told this by Chung Wai-on, Ng's friend.

Chung said that he, the accused, and Ng were playing a game called "Chap Chai," which they ride on bicycles and try to cut in front of one another to make them fall.

The time was after 4 p.m. on February 1, and they were in Lo Lung Hang Street. Both he and Ng had made the accused fall from his bicycle.

The first time Ng dismounted him, accused swore at him and they both quarrelled.

"After that Ng and I chased accused down Lo Lung Hang Street to Baker Street. Ng and I turned back when one of the spokes of my bicycle broke.

"We returned the bicycle to the Hop Sing Bicycle shop at Lo Lung Hang Street and then I went up to the cockloft to change my clothes."

Witness said that he came down again and talked with Ng until the accused returned his bicycle to the shop.

"Accused came out and Ng pushed him on the shoulder and asked him why he swore at him. Accused then challenged Ng and took out his flick knife from his trouser pocket."

Hearing continues this afternoon.

Tried to stab

"I told Ng to run away, whereupon accused turned to me and tried to stab me. I dodged and ran away also."

Chung then said that he returned to the cockloft via the back door and took a small hammer and went out again. He said he feared Ng was in danger.

He did not see accused until he identified him at the Hung-ham police station the next day.

"As I came out from my house, I saw Ng walking down Lo Lung Hang Street and falling down. I ran to him and covered his wound with my jacket."

"Ng's mother and a folk came later and with their help, carried the boy to the pavement."

Witness said that he did not see accused stab Ng.

In a fight Detective Sergeant Cheung Sau of Hungnam police station testified that at 5.30 p.m. on February 1, he and Detective Inspector Ip Chi-chu went to the accused's house and questioned him.

He said accused told them he had been hiding a bicycle on that day and that he had been in a fight.

He also said that the accused gave Insp. Ip his flick knife when he was asked if he possessed one.

Accused was also cautioned and made a statement which was recorded and signed by all parties.

Hearing continues this afternoon.

25 years AGO

March, 1935

AN American missionary family suffered a double bereavement recently when their two young daughters were drowned in distressing circumstances.

The family, Dr and Mrs J. Mansfield Bailey were travelling in the Baptist Mission car from Wuchow to Kweilin when the vehicle ran off the ferry boat into the river.

Both Martha, aged 7 and Ruth, aged eight, were drowned.

No further details are available, except that Dr Mansfield Bailey had decided to drive the car.

Mr E. J. Ainslie, aged 80, formerly of the staff of Lano Crawford Ltd. had an unfortunate accident at 7 p.m. yesterday when he fell into the harbour from the Praya Wall while approaching the Star Ferry.

Rescue was quickly at hand and Mr Ainslie was pulled to safety and taken to the Government Civil Hospital suffering from shock of his unexpected submersion.

Mr Ainslie was catching a ferry when he apparently wandered too near the edge of the wharf.

THE most dramatic Court Martial in the annals of the British Navy since the Royal Oak incident in 1932, took place at Portsmouth yesterday when Rear Admiral Sidney Robert Bailey, commanding the Battle Cruiser Squadron, Home Fleet, was charged under the Naval Discipline Act of 1866 and found not guilty.

The charge arose out of the collision of the giant battle cruisers HMS Hood and HMS Renown on January 23 when both ships were damaged.

The charge against Bailey is that he "negligently or by default, on January 23, suffered HMS Hood and HMS Renown to be hazarded."

The prosecutor, Rear Admiral J. A. Troup, submitted a letter signed by himself stating that it appeared Bailey was to blame in that, having ordered the Renown to close on the Hood, he failed to take action to prevent a development of a situation in which the risk of collision arose.

The court found Bailey not guilty, however, but two other officers are awaiting court martial.

Two Russian girls who came to Hongkong from Canton with their American sailor friends and who disembarked from the train at the Tsimshatsui station from the back carriage and then crossed Salisbury Road, were each fined $20 for coming in without a passport. They were also expelled.
